

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR ASSETS

The high cards and distribution of your hand are the assets that a bridge player will use, whether declaring or defending. Making the most of them entails bidding properly, declaring well, and following defensive principles in order to defeat the opponents contract.

This class will focus on all three elements of the game – bidding, declarer play and defending – so future play will be more enjoyable, satisfying and fun.

No need to have your own partner to participate. Many players come solo and meet other local bridge players. Lots of hands to play and analyze to demonstrate the concepts.

POLISHING YOUR DEFENSIVE FOUNDATION

Yes, your opponents hold the cards, but your objective is to defeat them in a major way! This series will zero in on the most effective ways to do this. The opening lead sets the stage for the defenders attack, and builds from there with both second and third hand play, as well as signals.

Defense is the most difficult element of the game, but the most satisfying when it works! Come experience the pleasure you can have as a defender, despite how little you may have to work with.

Even if you have taken a previous class on defense, this series will augment your understandings, and provide further opportunities to practice the important ideas that good bridge players strive for.
